Question No. 01

Asanka, a craftsman specializing in handcart wood designs, started up in business on 1 January 2012.

During the first year of trading, Asanka was so busy designing various items, that he did not prepare detailed accounts. However, he maintained transactions records and on 31 December 2012 made a brief note of his financial position, which showed the following:

- a. There were workshop fixtures that had cost Rs.4, 000 on 1 January 2012 in Asanka's workshop. The premises were leased for four years at a rental of Rs.800 per annum. No premium had been paid for the lease. It was decided to write off the fixtures over four years.
- b. A stock of materials that had cost Rs.8, 300.
- c. Customers owed Rs.17, 180 for sold handcraft items that had been accepted by the customers.
- d. Suppliers were owed Rs.9, 000.
- e. There was a bank overdraft of Rs.960 and cash in hand of Rs.360.
- f. Asanka had withdrawn Rs.9, 600 for his living expenses during the year ended 31 December 2012.
- g. Office expense creditors amounted to Rs.1, 280.

Asanka felt depressed as he had just run into overdraft, and he felt that it was not worth producing financial accounts on 31 December 2012. However, encouraged by Inland Revenue, he decided that he would continue with the basic records and prepare final accounts as at 31 December 2013, when the position of the business should have improved.

On 31 December 2013 Asanka took the following records to his accountant:

- A. Cash and bank analysis 1 January 2013 to 31 December 2013

Debtors	Rs.17, 980
Creditors	Rs. 4,140
Stock of materials, etc.	Rs.10, 980

The accountant obtained the following additional information at his interview with Asanka:

- Bank charges of Rs.120 appeared in the bank statements, but were not included in the cash analysis
- A private account of Rs.400 has been paid to Asanka, but had been included as an office expense
- Rent on office premises of Rs.800 was paid and is included in office expenses Rs.8, 200 above.
